

Jarred Paule, 9

He sets high standards for himself and meets it / "I get like a source of dopamine if I get a 100% on a test. I would actually die if I got an 80% or lower on a test."

SENIOR SPOT ESSENTIALS

1

SUPPLIES FOR SUCCESS

"Bring extra paint and bring an easy up for some shade."

Tanner Smith, 12

2

WATER FOR BRUSHES

"My biggest tip would be to bring an umbrella because it's super hot. Also, it's really important to bring cups with water to wash your brushes because if you're using more than one color you might show up and not have water and then there is no way to wash your paint brushes."

Emily Miller, 12

3

FUN WITH FAMILY

"I had a family and friends help me paint it, we just went out there and had fun."

Cooper Cornelius, 12

FLASHLIGHT FINE ART

On Aug. 9, senior Aliyah Paige helps her friend paint their senior parking spot. Paige liked working on it especially since she got to spend time with her friends and paint, but had some troubles in the dark. "It was a little bit of a struggle in the dark. We tried using car headlights for a little bit, but then we were scared our cars were gonna die and we ended up just using our phones and holding flashlights. It was difficult but we were able to paint in the dark," said Paige. Photo by Isabell Mendoza

ORANGE POPPIES & BLUE SKIES

Pictured is senior Lauryn Shohbozian, signing the bottom of her California poppy themed parking spot. Photo by Mika James

PARALLEL PAINTING

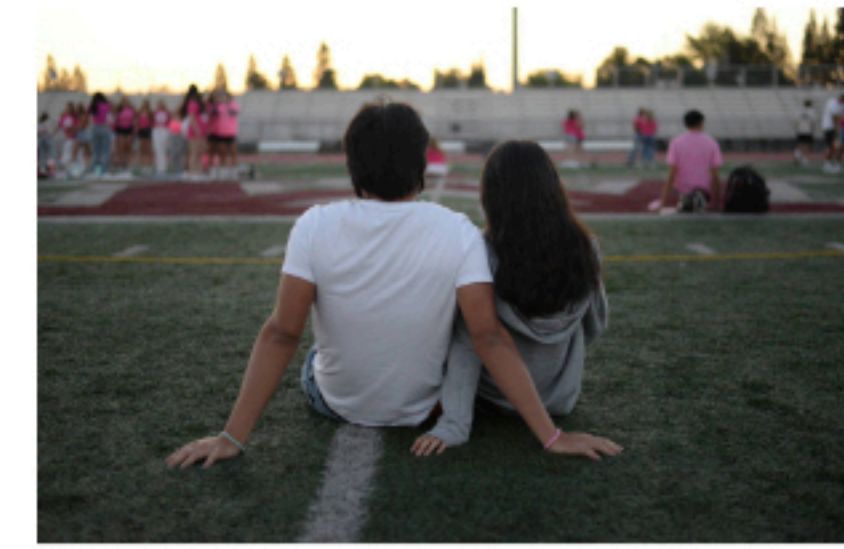

Senior Amira Hanna paints her parking spot with inspirational lyrics, motivating her to keep going through her last year of high school. Hanna, joined by her friends, decorated a parking space with song lyrics from 'Migraine' by Twenty One Pilots, saying, "we've made it this far kid,". Hanna said, "Your brain can take over rational thinking and instead of thinking of the worst things in life, trying to end it all or something like [that], you just have to tell yourself you've made it this far and keep going." Photo by Sienna Reddell

GOT THE DRIVE

During parking spot painting, senior Naiomi Kelley helps create her friend's, senior Whitney Cser's, senior parking spot. Kelley had a lot of drive and put her best into the spot working on it for almost eight hours. "I didn't get a spot, but it felt like I got to do a spot and that's what made it feel really special. Even though it wasn't for me, I would've been happy to do [it] for so many people," Kelley said. Photo by Sienna Reddell

I'LL SAVE YOU A SPOT

Seniors customize their parking spots for their final year

MORNING MOMENTS

Pictured are seniors Louis Barron and Paola Soria Piedra on the 50 yard line during the senior sunrise event for the class of 24. Photo by Kate Weidkamp

UNKNOWN BEGINNINGS

On the early morning of Aug. 10, senior Sarah Catterlin laughs with her friends seniors Gracy Sandhu, Avery Harmon and Seja Dervisagic. Catterlin enjoyed watching the sunrise and thought that it was a good way to start off her senior year. "It feels nice to be a senior and almost done with high school, but I'm also sad that this period of my life is almost over and I feel anxious about deciding what I'm going to do for the rest of my life," said Catterlin. Photo by Kate Weidkamp

SOCIAL SENIORS

On his last first day of school, senior Radley Quiambao reunites with his friends Matthew Malia, Isiah Powell and Spencer Harris at senior sunrise on his last first day of school. The early 5 a.m. morning did not stop Quiambao from wanting to attend the event that "everyone was going [to]." "For [the] last first day, I was actually excited, I was a little bit more social than usual and also I was just talking a lot to other seniors," said Quiambao. Photo by Kate Weidkamp

DAWN OF A NEW ERA

HOBBLING & HUMBLING

Surrounded by friends at senior sunrise, senior Isabella Cabrera powers through her injury. While having a "humbling" experience at senior sunrise due to her crutches and cart Cabrera was inspired to attend the event despite being hurt because she thought it would be like something out of a movie. Cabrera was however let down by reality when everyone had their backs to the sunrise. Also pictured are seniors Julia Holbert and Hailey Hinkle. Photo by Kate Weidkamp

IT'S NO BIGGY...

Newly formed art 1 course draws success from collaborative team building activity

In their art 1 class, junior Aaron Millsap and his team were accomplishing an activity that faculty member Kate Weidkamp assigned for bonding purposes. They each had a ribbon attached to a marker and had to draw their assigned animal. "Everyone communicated together to work as a team to get the job done, that helped us succeed the most," said Millsap. Photo by Kate Weidkamp

SIMILAR IN SPIRIT

TWO PEAS IN A POD

On Aug. 10, sophomore Davis Raisbeck cheers his class on, twinning in "pea green" alongside his brother. Davis had been a rally leader his freshman year and he wanted to continue that lively tradition in his sophomore year. "I dressed up as a pea with my brother because all last year we were rally leaders, so I felt like it'd be fun to do it again this year. I had a really good time doing it and just supporting my sophomore classmates," said Raisbeck. Photo Photo by Kate

BUBBLE BATTLE

On the opening day rally, freshman Kaelyn Larson lands head first during a class competition. Larson participated in a head-to-head bubble competition with someone twice her size. Even though Larson wasn't originally supposed to participate for the freshmen, it ended up being a highlight of the day for her. Photo by Kate Weidkamp

PROUD TO PERFORM

Pictured is dance team as they perform to 'Telephone' by Lady Gaga and Beyonce at the first day of school rally. Photo by Kate Weidkamp

Weidkamp

SCREAMING SENIORS

The seniors erupt with excitement, having won the traditional scream competition. On Aug. 10, classes clashed at the 'Soaring into the New School Year' themed rally. Starting off their last year, seniors won the contest. "It just feels like a normal year for me and half the time I be forgetting that like damn, I'm really a senior now," said senior Isaac Earls. Photo by Kate Weidkamp