

"[My favorite part] in the Spider-Man movie is where he goes to the spider society and there's a bunch of other Spider-Men. [Seeing the] Spider-Men all together and seeing how different they were was just cool to watch."

Barbenheimer

"The Barbie movie was pretty good; it had a lot of critiques on things like the social aspect of the world and the patriarchy."

– Mia Marie Amor Vierra (11)

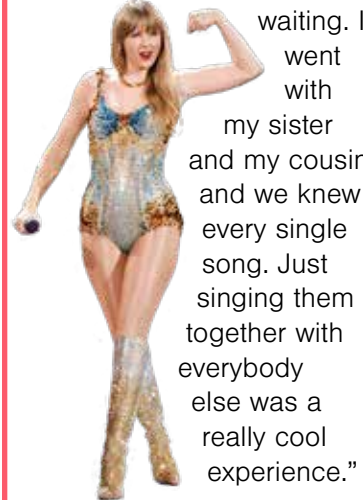

"I really liked the way [Oppenheimer] played with the morality of creating the nuclear bomb and dropping it on Japan. I think it deserved to get hyped up because it talks about something that's an important part of our history that is sort of glossed over."

"The opening was the best, since I'd been seeing [the tour] everywhere and been waiting. I went with my sister and my cousin and we knew every single song. Just singing them all together with everybody else was a really cool experience."

"I've liked [this aesthetic] since I was little, and I grew up with it. I think almost all girls go through this phase where they're like, 'I hate pink.' And I was one of them, but now I like pink again. It's just a very comforting childhood color to me."
